

Tim Ellis, founder of The Australian Institute of Magic and The Melbourne Magic Festival, has performed on stages in over 40 countries, including six seasons at the famous Magic Castle in Hollywood.

He was voted Best Stage Magician and Best Close up Magician in Australia, and is the first Australian ever to win two awards at The World Championships of Magic.

He is a Magician, Actor, Author, Inventor, Lecturer, and Magic consultant for film and television, and appears regularly on TV shows like The Project, Sunrise, and The Today Show

He lives in Melbourne, Australia where he has his own custom-built, close up magic venue, The Laneway Theatre.

He holds a Guinness World Record for the world's longest magic show – 85 hours – and tonight he's going to attempt to break his own record.
